isolating environments
using docker
containers for quick
development, testing
and shipping

we need to setup same development environment

install different software packages on different computers

doesn't work on my M3

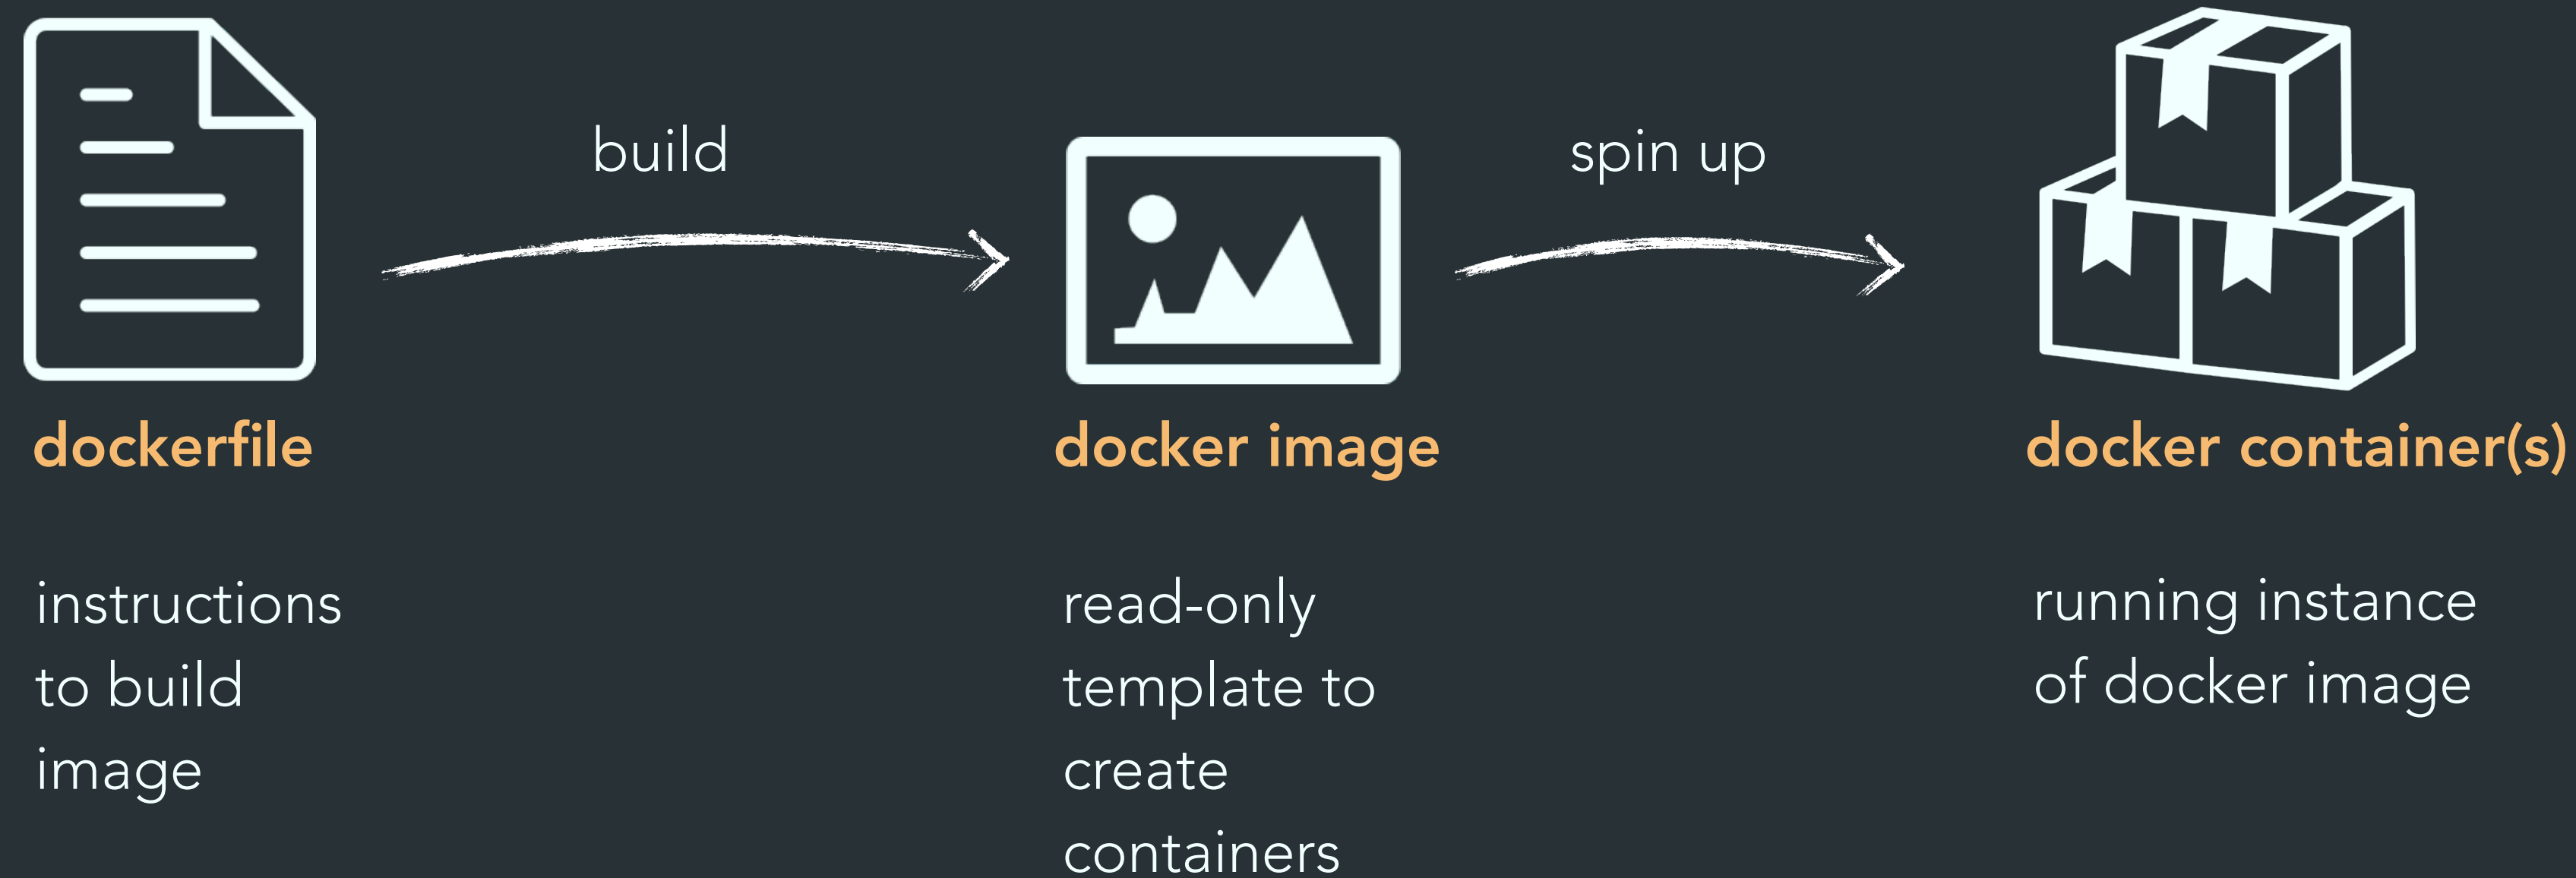

works like a
charm

crap I have several versions of python

what if there was an environment that works for everyone?

creating an image to spin up a docker container sharing docker images for your friends to spin up containers they can now spin up docker containers with same isolated environment
